SPIRIT OF THE MORNING PRESS The Union, commenting on the recent trial at Lowell, Mass, wherein a Know Nothing was compelled to answer questions concerning the lodge to which he belonged, says :

"When a genuine American sees that the grossest crimes are to be palliated—that the most abandoned profligates are to be protected -that his fellow-beings are to be persecuted because they do not worship at the same shrine with himself-and that nothing, neither invincible courage and inestimable services on the battle-field, neither deeds of charity, neither | Union. generosity nor spotless reputation, nor the most distinguished abilities, can protect an adopted citizen from the furious proscriptions of these imitators of the worst tyrants of bygone ages-when he sees these things he will recoil from the impulsive oaths he has taken, and boldly stand forth the vindicator of that equality and equity which are so peculiarly the characteristics of our institutions. Curiosity cannot be gratified in seeing men guilty of infamous crimes rescued from justice; curiosity cannot be gratified by the spectacle of an honest man taking the name of God in vain to persecute his brother and friend simply for a religious difference; curiosity cannot be gratified by that self prostitution which compels an American citizen to defy the laws upon which our liberties repose, and to proscribe a man because he was born in the land of Lafayette, or of Montgomery, or Kosciusko, or Gal latin. And here let us appeal to the young men of our country, who are enticed into these dens of impiety and intolerance by the seductive glare of a false patriotism It is not patriotism to proscribe; it is not patriotism to lie; it is not patriotism to assist to degrade those whom we meet every day, and who, before God and the law, are our equal and whom we know to be good men."

The Intelligencer is devoted principally to the work of showing that the northern Democrats are quite as ultra against southern rights as northern Whigs, and by way of repelling the efforts of the southern Democrats to incorporate-swallow up, as it were-the southern Whigs, the editor says :

"The subjoined article from the New Orleans Bee very aptly points out the reasons which have rendered the Democrats of the South so affectionate towards the Whigs of the South All they want just now is that the National Whigs should quiety and meekly fall into the Democratic ranks-nothing more; and to accomplish all this they are full of "smiles and affability." The names of CLAY and WEB-STER are most reverently mentioned, and all the glorious recollections of the past are invoked and dwelt upon with a touching degree of sentimentality. But the National Whigs will respectfully decline the overture, with all its entrenchments, having faith in their own principles, and an abiding confidence that there is enough of wisdom and conservatism left in the country to save it from mischief and agi tation, North and South. In the language of a modern writer, they feel that they have time "to cipher out their destiny through years, as the Chaldean men were wont to do in ages past.'

The Sentinel gives the Whigs "fits" again

WASHINGTON NEWS AND GOSSIP.

Kansas -According to information that has reached Washington, on which we have every reason to rely, emigration to Kansas has greatly slackened recently; while, perhaps, as many persons as ever who go there, intending to remain, cross over into the new territory, a AN EXCELLENT FAMILY AND WASHING great number leave it within one or two weeks after entering its borders. Thus, in a month, something like a thousand are said to have reached the town or settlement of New Boston, the head-quarters of the Anti-slavery Emigration Aid Societies. Yet, at the end of that month, not more than three hundred souls were numbered among its citizens. The truth s, in their eagerness to effect a political end these aid societies have rushed out to the frontier all sorts and any sort of people, provided they plead poverty and declare themselves disposed to oppose the legalization of slavery their colonists been wholly unsuited to success in an entirely new country, but the societies have failed to provide necessaries for the supply of their first and imperative wants in their proposed new home. We mean temporary food and shelter. The consequence has been that the city street-loafers, &c., whom they have sent out, have deserted their positions promptly, to keep body and soul togetherrunning back to the settlements; and those among them able to go further, "making tracks" for their New England homes. The 'ugly'' disposition of the Missourians, by whom they are surrounded, too, has certainly operated to increase the disinclination of the New England pauper emigration to remain. The former take no pains to conceal their dis like to having persons sent out on charity, squatting among them for a political end. A bloody struggle is seen afar off, if the Northern men andertake to carry out the ultraisme they were dispatched thither to initiate, by parties who value whole skins too highly to venture among the bona fide frontiersmen to put their views of what is best for the latter. into practice. Up to this time, the great weight-influence as well as numbers-of the emigration is of men imbued with Southern sentiments. That is, of the emigration making a permanent settlement in Kansas. There is no telling, however, how long it may be before the scale changes, though at present there seems no prospect of a change in this particular. We have, further, every reason to believe that Nebraska offers many more induce ments to the Northern settler, if but in the fact that most of the aid societies' people who concluding not to remain in Kansas, yet determine to stay in the far West, move over there, and seem quite contented. We thav now no idea, from the best information within our reach, that Kansas can possibly have population within a year sufficient to justify her in applying for admission as a State into the A Change of Tune. - We are not a little amused at the tone of the New York Tribune, that pink of consistency, morality, propriety. and all that sort of thing, with reference to the recent Worcester mob. In this affair, a citizen of Boston, against whom it was alone complained that he had discharged his duty as an officer of the law in the due execution of an unpopular statute, was hooted, pelted, bruised, and otherwise maltreated by a mob of some five hundred citizens of "law-abiding New England;" his life being saved only by the interference of half a-dozen persons. whose influence and teachings had, in fact stirred up the mob aforesaid to assail this sin gle man. For many years past, we have read in the Tribune lessons against mob-violence. that journal being in the habit of almost daily handing over the South to the tender mercies of the devil and his imps, for mobbing negro thieves-persons violating the laws by robbing citizens of the South of their property under the laws. This immaculate journal argues, in effect, that the five hundred white and black negroes of Worcester, engaged in mobbing the Boston officer, were heroes, Christians, and doers of a good work. We refer to the position of that journal in this case, only by way of exposing the hypocrisy of its conductors, or their insanity. For our part, we do not regret the occurrence of this Worcester affair; inasmuch as it must expedite the day for the final settlement of all the existing trouble between the North and South on the slavery question. If the Tribune people, and their coadjutors in this work of barefaced robbery and utter disregard of the obligations of the Constitution and the Laws where the rights of owners of slave property are concerned, fancy that they are to have all the fun of law break blandishments. They will stand firm in their ing on their side, they will not long hence find themselves woefully mistaken, to the great loss of those at the North, who may have anything to lose in the way of Southern custom, or property of any description in the South. It cannot be much longer before forbearance en the part of the South, ceasing to be a vir tue, will be abandoned as the Southern policy When that day arrives, those really interested in the well being of the North, being made to understand the necessity for compelling their fools, madmen, fanatics, bigots, and demagogues to mind their own business, will be very sure to do so; in time, too, we have every reason to believe, to avert the otherwise eventual consequences of this systematic crusade against Southern rights of property, &c, in which the peculiar classes of the Northern public enumerated above are at in retaliation, made in the South, will speedily teach the North the better policy of mind ing matters only which concern herself; or, at least, to let alone those of the South, in which

BALTIMORE CORRESPONDENCE

A Matter for Baltimoreans to think of-Probable Appointment-Heavy Payment-The Money Market.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 3, 1854.

The light receipts of flour in Baltimore this season, have been attributed to the drought, and are mainly consequent upon that cause. There are other causes, however, which all do not know or fully understand. I therefore propose briefly alluding to them, especially as our home journals are indisposed towards broaching the subject.

Several of our commission flour merchants, who receive flour from various parts of the country for sale, have, occasionally, been in in the habit, (so it is said,) of shipping the same, or a portion of it, to New York, where it is sold at an average of fifty cents per barrel, independent of the cost of shipment, above the current Baltimore price. They then price up the flour to the country dealer or producer at the quoted rate in Baltimore, the owner or owners supposing it to have been sold here, and in this way turn a handsome penny independent of the regular commission. A good many miliers and others at a distance have discovered this secret—not only that, but ascertained the fact that if money is to be made by such operations, they may as well make it themselves; hence, instead of sending their flour to Baltimore to pass through an agency here, they ship it direct to New York on their present engaged. A few hundred examples own account. I know of one gentleman alone, a miller in Virginia, who sent largely of his flour to this market for sale, who within the past eighteen months has been sending nearly or quite all his produce to New York, and, as a general thing, made fifty cents per barrel more than if it had been sold in our market, at the current prices. Here, then is a reason independent of the drought and interruption to milling from low water, why the supply and receipts of flour in Baltimore, are falling off. The fact is one of regret, but it cannot be disguised. So long as millers and others in the country can realize better prices for their flour in New York, with scarcely any risk or additional trouble, than in Baltimore, they will send it there, nor would they be considered shrewd business men if they did not. It is not my province at present to suggest the remedy for this interruption to our trade. Our dealers will, perhaps, see the evil, and in self defence fall upon some plan by which Baltimoreans can give as good prices, correspondingly, for flour, as can be had elsewhere. The future interest of our city in this great branch of her trade, demand that it should be seen to. Let the flour and grain business depart from Baltimore and half her glory is gone.

It is now said that Grafton L. Dulaney,

Esq., will probably be appointed City Counsellor under the new administration If so, the appointment will be an admirable one. He is one of our very best and most highly es-Whig, though there is no harm in that
